Summary of Findings on Values from Consultations across the College Community

Community - equality amongst all members, an absence of hierarchy and opportunity for all to actively participate in College governance, a supportive environment, especially welcoming to new members, with all contributing socially and to academic achievement and adopting the ethos of the College

Individuality within the Community - acceptance of individuality, mutual respect amongst all members for diversity of opinions/religions/cultures/personalities and encouragement of individual pursuits and successes

Personal Growth and Development – responsibility to make the most of one’s abilities

Leadership - responsibility to contribute within the College community and as alumni to the world at large to advancement of human knowledge, to social justice and to environmentally sustainable progress

Objects stated in College Rules (constitution)
“The objects of Burgmann Council are the provision, through the sponsorship of the participating Churches, of a residential College within and affiliated with the University, for undergraduate students, postgraduate students, University staff and guests, drawn from all over Australia and overseas, emphasising:
(a) a vital community; and
(b) pastoral care, including a chapel and chaplaincy service for the College community and, if possible, a wider University population; and
(c) tuition; and
(d) supervision of students, of a kind that involves maximum co-operation with student bodies and is flexible in meeting modern needs; and
(e) theological work at an advanced academic level; and
(f) the meeting of University persons with persons from outside the University world.”

Vision statement
A residential learning community within the Australian National University striving for academic achievement and the development of leadership in a sustainable, caring and enjoyable environment of diverse faiths, cultures and disciplines.
